"IT'S THE GREATEST THING I EVER SAW!"

Thousands of people have said so. It's a fact. Nothing in the world will kill every foul smell so quickly and permanently as

OZONOS

DISINFECTANT.

That is the season when Ozonos is a necessity in every family. The deadly fevers are caused by impure air arising from foul drains, waste pipes, sinks, cesspools, etc., etc. Don't delay. Apply Ozonos to every suspicious spot.

It is so economical all can afford to use it. No tidy housekeeper should do her cleaning without it. It is absolutely harmless, non-poisonous and odorless.

One bottle, for, diluted, makes 25 to 100 gallons. All Druggists and Grocers. Send for circular.

A WELL KNOWN MAN

Death of Hon. J. C. Dodge, a Native of Maine.

BOSTON, July 18. Hon. John C. Dodge a prominent lawyer and well known resident of Cambridge, died Thursday. He was born in Newcastle, Me., and graduated at Bowdoin College in 1824.

In 1842 he opened his office in Boston and making maritime law his specialty rose to a high rank in his profession. He represented Cambridge in the Massachusetts House of Representatives and district in the State Senate. For some years he was one of the overseers of Bowdoin College and was also President of the board. In 1875 he received a degree of LL. D. from that college.

THE LATE REV. MR. CARPENTER

His Remains Carried to Bridgton.

BAR HARBOR, July 18. The remains of the late Rev. H. Bernard Carpenter were carried to Bridgton, Maine, this morning on the 11.25 train.

Hon. and Mrs. Frank Jones, Gen. Benet, Dr. and Mrs. Goss and Miss Jackson accompanied the remains to Mount Desert Ferry. A few friends went through with Mrs. Carpenter.

FROM BAR HARBOR

A Gala Day in the Harbor—U. S. Steamers in Port.

BAR HARBOR, July 18. This is a gala at Bar Harbor. The yacht fleet and the United States war ships are in the harbor. The Kearsarge, Dolphin and Petrel, after some maneuvering in the bay, came silently to anchor at 6 o'clock. There is a splendid breeze. The yachts sailed around the ships while crowds of people looked on from the shore.

AN INSECT PLAGUE.

Pottsville, Pa., Visited by Large Swarms, Covering Everything.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., July 18. A plague of moth flies, or as they are also styled, "electric light bugs," invaded the town last night and literally covered everything. They so filled the electric light globes as to dim the lights.

The pests died by millions before morning and left a nauseating odor in the air.

DEMOCRATIC OUTRAGES.

A Case which will be Carried to Washington.

NEW YORK, July 18. A special from Ysleta, Texas, says that the pistol battle of last Friday night between the factions of Gail (Rep.) and Alderete (Dem.) will be turned to account by the Republicans as campaign material. They have decided to carry the matter to Washington and present it to the committee on another Southern Democratic outrage. Twenty men arrested for complicity in the shooting affray were brought before District Judge Falvey, at El Paso, yesterday afternoon on a writ of habeas corpus and were admitted to bail. All the machines for arrested belong to the Republican faction, but it is rumored that sundry Democratic participants in the battle will shortly be arrested.

UNITED STATES ARMY.

Report that Division Commands may be Abolished.

CHICAGO, July 18. It is unofficially announced that President Harrison and Secretary Proctor are considering a proposition to abolish the present system of division commands in the United States army, leaving the business to be transacted by direct communication with Washington.

Gen. Williams, of division headquarters here, seriously questions the practicability of such a move.

MASSACHUSETTS.

A TRAGIC DEATH.

President Menendez of Guatemala Shot Through the Heart

By Soldiers Who Surrounded the Palace at Night.

NEW YORK, July 18. The Herald prints a letter from Guatemala, dated June 26, stating that the place was in fever heat in regard to politics. From authoritative sources the following facts are learned in regard to the death of President Menendez:

On June 22, while a grand ball given by the President was in progress at the palace, the building was surrounded by troops and an attack made upon it. The President rushed to his private room and seizing his sword and pistols ran to the main entrance and fired into the crowd of soldiers in front. He then stepped back and immediately fell dead in the arms of an attendant, shot through the heart by one of the soldiers.

General Barrios then seized the palace and issued a proclamation declaring himself President.

COTTAGE BURGLARIZED.

Diamonds and Jewelry Worth $10,000 Stolen.

TROY, N. Y., July 18. The Lester cottage at Saratoga, occupied by George C. Bliss, who is his guests Vice President and Mrs. Morton, was entered by burglars last night and $10,000 worth of diamonds and jewelry were stolen.

The valuables were the property of Mrs. Bliss.

BREWER LOCALS.

The schooner Charles W. Church finished loading tide from F. W. Ayer & Co. at the Waterman & Engel houses, yesterday.

The schooners A. F. Kladberg and Annie P. Chase have finished loading lumber at Ayer's mills for New York and sailed.

The schooner Festina was being loaded yesterday at Ayer's wharf with ice from the Hollins stacks, situated at the head of the wharf.

Misses Cora and Fanny Spaulding leave to-day on the Bar Harbor boat for South West Harbor where they are to spend a few weeks.

The six-tenement house at South Brewer, being built by D. Sargent Sons, is going rapidly up, part of the frame being already in place.

The walk on the down river side of the toll bridge, which is the side used almost exclusively by pedestrians and in consequence somewhat out of repair, is being repaired.

The Misses Hardy, at their home on Wilson street, gave a most enjoyable cobweb party Thursday evening to a number of their friends. A very pleasant evening was spent in unraveling the tangles.

Mr. Herbert Hopkins, who has been a clerk for some time for Nickerson & Bartstow, left last night for Portland, where he is to enter a machine shop for the purpose of learning the business, he preferring it to dealing in groceries.

The brackets to hold the arms which will support the trolley wire for the street railway have been distributed along the line of the road and will be placed on the poles at once. These will only be used when the track is laid at one side of the street.

The rails for the street railway have been laid as far as Penobscot Square. From the curve at Holyoke Square, where it turns into Centre street, to the crossing at the foot of the street the sleepers have been laid on the surface of the ground and gravel will be filled in until the street is properly graded, with the center higher than the sides.

The steamer Castine, with the Alumni of the High School, and their friends aboard, almost came to grief in an alarming manner yesterday morning. While attempting to land at South Brewer to obtain some excursionists from that part of the city, the boat grounded on a bar of sawdust and edgings. Fortunately the steamer Little Gulteroup was at hand and pulled them off and the excursion was continued.

Mr. Charles Maling met with another accident day before yesterday which will prevent his working for a few days. Some time ago he cut his foot quite badly with an ice pick and he had hardly got this on the road toward recovery and got back at his work when he had the misfortune to have a cake of ice fall upon the foot, bursting the cut open and making it rather lame for some days to come.

Quite extensive repairs are going on at the Eastern Manufacturing Company's pulp mill at South Brewer. In all the rooms with the exception of the wet machine, engine room and the wood preparing rooms, cement floors are being laid. In the acid tower the whole system of making the liquors is being changed, the piping in the acid tanks being so arranged as to make the flow intermittent instead of continuous. New vats are being built for the wet machines and in addition are being put in some riffers, which, it is expected, will make the pulp cleaner. The mill is being connected with the holly water pipes and three large hydrants about the buildings will secure safety from fire.

The steamer Electa which has run for some time between Castine and Belfast by the owners, living in this city and Bangor, has been sold to the syndicate of Philadelphia gentlemen who own and control Dark Harbor. They have formed a steamboat company and are to have an election of officers to-day and the steamer will probably be turned over to the new company on the fifteenth of August. The intention of the company is, we understand, to run the Castine between Rockland and Dark Harbor and to put a larger boat on the route between Belfast and Castine, which has outgrown the Electa. In addition, on a shorter route, probably from Ryder's cove to Dark Harbor, they are to put on a small steam launch.

Sunday Services.

Rev. A. G. Pettengill, of St. Cloud, Minn., will preach in the First Congregational people to-morrow morning at 10.30. Sunday school at 11.45. Y. P. S. C. E. meeting at 6; chapel service at 7. All are cordially invited to attend.

There will be no preaching service at the South Brewer Congregational church, owing to the absence of the pastor. The session of the Sunday school will be held at 10.30 and the Y. P. S. C. E. will hold their regular prayer meeting in the evening at 6.30.

First Methodist church, Rev. F. E. Whitham, pastor. Preaching by the pastor at 10.30. Sunday school at 12. Y. P. S. C. E. meeting at 6. Social meeting at 7.

Old Town News.

[Regular Correspondence Whig and Courier.]

Many of the Old Town people have left, or are leaving for the seashore.

The families of Mr. W. M. Rose and Mr. C. U. Gray left for Northport Thursday morning. Misses Clara and Abbie Cooper went to Machias, Wednesday.

Tuesday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Conant entertained the circle of "King's Daughters" in a very pleasant manner. In a beautiful grove near their home they spread an elegant lunch not the least of which was an abundance of delicious strawberries and ice cream. The strawberries are of Mr. Conant's raising and some of them measured 6¼ inches in circumference. The circle is now at work for Good Will Fared at Fairfield.

On Tuesday morning, as Miss Lelia Hoag, schoolmistress, by Mr. Elias [illegible] was driving [illegible] the residence of Hon. J. L. Smith, one side of the thill broke away from the cross-bar and the horse, which was a valuable and spirited one, took fright. The carriage became a bumped and filled [illegible] and in Gilman [illegible] Almost [illegible] carriage was somewhat wrecked, but it is a fortunate accident when no more serious results follow.

The Gospel Temperance meeting under the auspices of the Non-Partisan W. C. T. U., Sunday evening, at the Congregational church, was a success, and the house was crowded. A pleasing programme of songs and recitations had been arranged and this was followed by the topic, "What shall we do in temperance work for the Young?" The posters of the churches and others made remarks.

The work of drilling and blasting through the ledge on Academy hill progresses very slowly. The summit of the hill has just been reached. The engine which has been planted in one place for four weeks was moved Wednesday a little further along, thus showing some progress in the work.

A Thriving Town.

HOW VANCEBORO HAS GROWN.

The reading of the census returns for the town of Vanceboro, as published in the WHIG, a few days ago, suggested to your correspondent the idea to go down there soon, and look into the causes of the very satisfactory growth of that comparatively new town.

In fulfilment of such a purpose I presented myself to Mr. George Ross, yesterday, and told him my errand. He entered into the plan at once, and said he would aid me to whatever extent he could. Mr. Ross is an old resident of the young town, for he made his way to the place on the next day after the opening of the European and North American Railway, nineteen years ago, this fall. He has lived here ever since, and with the exception of the four years prior to 1886, has been in the hotel business, as we all know. It is interesting to note the evidences of the remarkable success which has attended the career of Mr. Ross, for though comparatively a young man, he has organized and built up a most complete system of hotel management, with, now, an addition of extensive farm investments from which, he draws his supplies of milk, butter, and garden vegetables, including a large acreage of potatoes. He has experimented very heavily in pork raising, but the heavy disaster of the early winter, last past, is still fresh in the minds of the readers of the WHIG. Not discouraged altogether by losses of this description the pork stock now numbers thirteen head, with numerous pigs.

A third item of occupation to such a busy man is the ownership and care of a few very choice horses, the latest addition to the number of which is that phenomenal two-year-old colt, "Robert Ai," bought by Mr. Ross, in Presque Isle, in the month of May.

After dinner we rode about the village, in all directions, and saw continually multiplying evidence of growth and prosperity, most substantial. The main streets extend north and south from the railway tracks and parallel to the St Croix river, with cross streets intersecting. On most all that we rode we soon reached the fence and bushes beyond, but the interesting feature of the situation was that Mr. Ross would say as we turned about, "This was extended last summer." "Here we opened the new part, for many rods, a year ago." On all these extensions new houses had gone up, or were in process of erection. It was said that the buildings were in the hands of individual holders for the far larger part, the tannery corporation owning but a few compared with the whole number. Three large, general stores do a heavy grocery and supply business, which is constantly increasing. To what may be attributed as the reasons of these healthy evidences of expansion, which the census returns have so completely established? Evidently to three important industrial enterprises, and the great expansion of two of them. First, the building up of the railway business. To one who knew the volume of the rail traffic at the date of the census of 1880 the change is almost marvelous. Second, the upbuilding of the lumber manufacturing industry, as seen in the extensive and valuable works of the Vanceboro Wooden Ware Company, and the new saw and grist mill of Mr. Herbert Drake. Before these, and yet pursuing the even tenor of its way, is the large tannery. We find their thrift and expansion in the town based upon the solid facts of staple business. Every man is at work for good wages, and he and his live, for the most part, in their own homes. E.

STATE NEWS.

AUGUSTA.

Rev. J. E. Goslin, pastor of the First Baptist church of Hallowell, returned last week from his vacation, bringing with him his bride who was Miss Harrison, of Sunset, N. B. Last Thursday evening the society gave him a reception at the residence of Mrs. C. D. Merrill.

Charles F. Weed, Esq., a prominent citizen of Aroostook county, died at his home in Littlefield, Sunday, at the age of thirty-three years. He was educated at Houlton Academy, Colby University and the Boston Law University. He was register of probate for Aroostook county for four years and at the time when he was stricken with paralysis, in November, 1888, he was a prominent candidate for the position of collectorship of customs for the district of Aroostook. He was also prominently connected with the Eastern & New Brunswick and New Brunswick Life Insurance Companies, being general manager and a director in each.

One Fort Fairfield farmer reports to Labor Commissioner Matthews that the income from his farm last year was $3,700 and another sets his income at $2,500. They do not talk of moving to Oklahoma at present.

Odd Fellows Day at Presque Isle, Tuesday of this week, was a success; the occasion calling the Odd Fellows together was the double installation of the officers both of the Lodge and the Encampment. Upon the arrival of the noon train, about one hundred and fifty Odd Fellows, members of Pioneer Lodge of Fort Fairfield, and of the Encampment and Canton, accompanied by ladies and the Fort Fairfield Band, arrived, also a delegation from Aroostook Valley Lodge of Caribou. Soon after dinner teams began to pour into town from every direction, and the streets of the village presented the appearance of a fourth of July celebration. Ridgely Lodge of Easton and industry Lodge of Washburn, came into town in good numbers, bringing many friends with them. At half-past four o'clock the procession was formed in front of Odd Fellows Hall and took up its line of march through the principal streets to Presque Isle Hotel. Here the Canton led a drill parade and then the procession divided for supper, which was served at the Pioneer and Presque Isle hotels. The evening exercises were held in Perry's Opera House.

dent from rumors of new cases and of new instances of persons being bitten by dogs heard from time to time. Happily thus far these rumors have not proved to be anything but rumors.

The use of electricity as a motive power is being rapidly extended in New England and almost every day records the introduction of a motor in some mill, factory or machine shop, or its application to the rapid transit question in cities or country towns. The running of the Androscoggin paper mills of S. D. Warren & Co., at Cumberland Mills, by electric power transmitted to motors in the mills from generators one and one-fourth miles distant, marks the beginning of what will doubtless be one of the greatest fields for the application of electricity and has attracted much attention in manufacturing circles everywhere.

REPUBLICAN County Convention.

The Republican voters of the County of Penobscot are notified to meet by Delegates in Convention at

CITY HALL, BANGOR,

—ON—

THURSDAY, THE 7TH DAY OF AUGUST NEXT,

At 10 o'clock A. M., to nominate three candidates for Senators, a candidate for Sheriff, for County Attorney, for Clerk of Courts, for County Treasurer, for Judge of Probate, for Register of Probate, for one County Commissioner and for such other business as may come before them.

BASIS OF REPRESENTATION.

Each city, town and plantation will be entitled to one delegate for every fifty votes cast for the Republican candidate for Governor in 1888, and for every fraction of twenty-five votes so cast in excess of the last fifty, additional delegates. Each town and plantation in which no votes were cast for Governor last year, will be entitled to one delegate. By vote of the last Convention, delegates will be entitled to seats in the convention upon their credentials of appointment. Blank forms of credentials will be sent by the Maine Central and the Bangor & Piscataquis Railroads to delegates.

The County Committee will be in session in the Alderquarters room at 10 o'clock, the morning of the Convention to receive credentials.

By order of the Republican County Committee.

The Attitude of the License Organs.

Nothing could be more absurd than the attempt of the Commercial to point a parallel between its championship of the saloons and THE WHIG's devotion to the cause of human liberty in the dark days of the rebellion. It wants to know if "THE WHIG considered the North bound to lay down its arms and surrender to the South because victory was with the latter in the first pitched battle of the war." Far from it. We left that sort of talk to the Commercial and its Democratic contemporaries in the North. THE WHIG stood then as it does now for the cause of the people, who will indignantly resent the Commercial's effort to place its saloon campaign on a level with that heroic struggle for the perpetuation of an undivided Union, which triumphed in spite of traitors North and South.

When asked if it will abide by the decision of the people in the fall election the Commercial bluntly admits that it will not accord fair treatment to the prohibitory law in case it happens indicated. Here is a paper that assumes to be the leader of its party, conducting what it is pleased to term an "educational campaign," and yet frankly admitting that unless it can decide for the people it will continue to stand as the uncompromising opponent of the law of the State and against its enforcement. This is an object lesson that cannot be too thoroughly studied by the people. The Commercial appeals for their sullenness with the threat on its lips that unless they accept its license doctrine it will so far as its columns are concerned repudiate their verdict at the polls. Having wrung this confession from it then early in the campaign the people can fully appreciate the intolerant spirit of the saloon organ. It is opposed to the law unless it can have such a law as it wants regardless of the wishes of a majority of the voters. In view of the fact that there is already a big split in the party, our impression is that such sentiments as those to which the Commercial gives voice, will increase the disgust felt for the self imposed leader by the more intelligent portion of the Democracy.

Keeping It Up.

The Calais Times does not seem inclined to take its orders from the would be party boss in this city and support the license campaign. It follows up its previous sharp criticism of the ring conspiracy with the remark: "At the school Democratic convention the party of the State was misrepresented by only a handful or two, who took an unfair advantage of the situation caused by the deplorable death of Francis W. Hill." These keen thrusts puncture a large sized hole in the claim of the Commercial that the unmuzzled license platform reflects the the sentiments of the Democrats of Eastern Maine.

The News Received With Satisfaction.

The appointment of Col. A. R. Fareham as postmaster and his prompt confirmation by the Senate has been received with general satisfaction by the people of this city. Even the Commercial testifies to this fact in the dismal failure, manifested in every line of a long screed published last night, to find any open criticism of the restoration of this excellent official. Everyone recognizes that Col. Fareham will give the public a fine administration of the service and his friends are legion in this community.

A Poor Showing for Licensee.

The sum and substance of the Commercial's defense of the license system seems to be that license works first rate when no attempt is made to prevent any man from selling rum. Its idea of a "reasonable" license law "reasonably" enforced appears to be an unfettered and unrestricted traffic for the sake of the revenue that might be derived from such a law. Confronted with the damaging fact that in Philadelphia there are some six thousand unlicensed rum-shops, it resorts that all this results from an unwise attempt to restrict the traffic. We have been told over and over again that the license law in Pennsylvania was as near as possible to the perfection of that system and yet the Commercial is forced to admit that it is a dismal failure so far as any restriction is concerned. But even the poor apology that it makes for the law is not valid, because it only that has forty-four retail saloons and fifty-two wholesale saloons in one ward, with the other wards nearly as well supplied, cannot be accused of placing very severe restrictions upon the traffic. The fact is the license law is violated just as the prohibitory law is and just as any law that interferes with the rum sellers will always be violated. When it talks about the people sustaining the law it the pulls us an argument showing its superiority over prohibition, our contemporary is dealing with a two edged sword.

best our contemporary can offer in the way of "educating the people" it may prepare itself for very disappointing results this fall.

They Want a Free Ballot.

The New York Evening Post published a two column editorial recently attacking the Election bill, in the course of which it claimed that the colored race did not want such legislation and in support of this assertion quoted from the remarks of a single individual. At a meeting of the Southern States Colored Republican Association the following address to the United States Senate was issued:

"The Southern States Colored Republican Association, having for its object the amelioration of the political condition of the colored voters in the South, do, in behalf of said voters, earnestly petition your honorable body to pass the Lodge Federal Election, which, in our judgment, is necessary to secure free and fair elections in the South. The best form of government is a republic, but the worst form of citizenship is disfranchised citizenship in a Republican form of government. That such a deplorable condition (disfranchised citizenship) is the fate of the colored citizens in the South is now admitted by both political parties. We do not seek domination over the white people of the South; we seek participation as citizens in the government of the South and the full enjoyment of every political right accorded by the constitution and laws of the United States. We congratulate the country that the Federal Election bill has passed the House of Representatives, and we pray for its speedy adopting by the Senate."

Congressman J. W. Maynard, Florida, Chairman; State Senator D. Wheeler, North Carolina; J. D. Hill, North Carolina, Committee on Address.

The next time the doughface editor attempts to criticise the Election bill he should cast his eye over this address before he proceeds to speak for the colored race.

Mr. Breckinridge Pilloried.

[New York Tribune.]

It is no wonder that Mr. Clifton R. Breckinridge wanted "time" to prepare his reply to the masterly speech in which the ex-Chief Justice of Arkansas held him up to public indignation. But Mr. Breckinridge wants other things more than time. He is in especial need of facts and of a clear conscience. The position in which he is placed is most deplorable. It is painful and shocking too, to see a man of his mental strength the apologist of fraud and the benefactory of murder! He is a glaring witness of the moral blight which the political methods of the Southern Democracy cast upon its public men. It is a blight that cannot be escaped or thrown off. It comes with every Democrat a nomination in the South. It is accepted by every man who consents to carry the standard of the Bourbon party. If he cherishes ambition, he must nurse dishonor. The controlling element of every Bourbon constituency is a mob of negro-haters. It has but one principle—the suppression of the negro vote. Its tools are fraud, outrage and assassination, and the man who essays a political career through its as sport, as he profits by these horrid devices must hold himself ready to become their champion.

Mr. Breckinridge, having shouted the phrases of the Mephistophelian language, is now obeying Injunction's requirement. He has richly earned the denunciations with which he was overwhelmed on Tuesday. Judge McClure spoke with intense feeling, for he himself has had many warnings of the fate that met Clayton, but he spoke justly too. The chance by which Mr. Breckinridge became informed with "the inhuman mantle of the dead" are possible in any district in the Black Belt where Republicans attempt to show the courage of their convict one. In the debates which have just taken place upon the Federal Elections bill we have been constantly assured by Democrats that the South is in a peaceful condition, that whites and blacks are living side by side quietly.

Where is that the case? No one who knows the present condition of the South can truthfully deny that it is the case only where the colored people have been awed by force and robbed by fraud into patient submission. It is the case only where they have given up the struggle. But upon their slightest manifestation of a purpose to exercise the rights so dearly bought and so solemnly guaranteed to them, all the horrors of the Ku-Klux and White Leagues are at once renewed. Not infrequently do we hear a frank acknowledgment of this fact from Bourbon Congressmen. Only the other day one of them frankly said, "We, white men must rule in the South or we must emigrate, and, by heaven, we will not emigrate!" This means, if it means anything that they will do not what the partisans of Breckinridge have done—steal ballot-boxes and murder Republican leaders.

We shall freely see, when the vote is taken upon the motion to unseat Mr. Breckinridge, how far this policy is approved by the Democracy as it is represented in Congress. It would be agreeable to know that there are Democratic members of Congress who do not approve political crimes as the agent of political purposes, and who decline to acknowledge such a course as the test of party faith or party fealty. Among the representatives of an organization which counts its adherents in millions there surely should be a few who can afford to take his honorable stand, and to declare with the Democratic Circuit Judge in Arkansas that "assassination is the result of the political methods which have been employed in this country to carry the last election," and that "the moment of men in the professional politicians who advocate or tolerate such methods." We sadly fear that this Democratic definition of the manhood of men will have a numerous application when the roll is called in the case of Mr. Breckinridge.

A Plea for Life Insurance.

The importance of life insurance to all those who have others dependent upon them is so fully and so forcibly set forth by the Connecticut Mutual in its circular that we cannot do better than to quote from it. It says: "Life insurance has come into existence and attained its present proportions, and its peculiar features, which have been slowly developed by experience, are those which the wisdom of ages has proved to be most needed by the mass of men. Life insurance has been and still is, the product of a long human and social evolution, which has proved to be the best form of insurance and saving that meets human needs. Keep to it."

B G BLAZE IN NEW YORK.

The Great Western Union Building Gutted by Fire.

Many Operators Have Narrow Escapes from Burning.

Occupants Nearly Caught, so Sudden was the Outbreak.

Much Valuable Property Ruined by Fire and Water.

Wires Down and Business Greatly Interrupted.

NEW YORK, July 18. This morning, shortly before 7 o'clock, flames burst from the switchboard of the Western Union operating room in the seventh floor of their building at the corner of Broadway and Dey streets. So rapidly did they spread that the escape of the employes by the stairways was cut off and a number were lowered from the windows by means of ropes to the tops of adjoining buildings.

The fire extended from the fifth to the upper stories of the building, including the operating room. Associated Press offices, the exceptions offices of the Western Union Telegraph Company and the upper floor, used for restaurant purposes and as a and family. At 3.00 the fire department claimed to have the fire under control.

The big Western Union Telegraph Company's building was gutted by fire. The building was nine stories high, with a cupola, and contained the offices of Jay Gould, the Pacific railroads and the New York Associated Press, together with the operating rooms of the Western Union Telegraph Company. There were several narrow escapes from accident.

The fire broke out at 7.30 A. M. in the great operating room on the seventh floor. According to all reports there were about twenty people in the operating room at the time, including fifteen women and five or six men. The first sign of fire was discovered in one of the divisions of the operating room fronting on Broadway.

A Ball of Smoke

came up through the shafts in the floor when the men in the room adjoining the fire exits which are provided plentifully about the place in event of an emergency like this and rushed up the floor as fast as they could.

It was soon apparent that the fire was beyond their control and they were ordered to flee for their lives, which they did by the stairs, through which smoke was coming from the floor below. Several of them made their way down, while others went down the fire escapes.

Before the people on the seventh floor had fairly realized their danger the smoke was making its way in blouds into the rooms of the ninth floor, occupied in part by the Associated Press and an apartment used as a restaurant for the use of the hundreds of employes in the building. In the restaurant were six women and a man.

They all made their escape without accident, by the staircase but one woman, Julia Lynch, the colored janitress, was partially suffocated by smoke and was hurt by falling on the staircase.

There was the wildest excitement in the neighborhood of the burning building. Respondent, in the front of the burning structure, was soon filled with people and before the police had drawn the fire lines the greatest confusion prevailed.

The flames sprang out from the two upper floors of the massive building and sent clouds of smoke soaring away over the city in every direction.

The fire hose came in response to the alarm sent out by the police and poured great streams as into every side from Broadway, Dey street, Fulton street and New Church street, to the rear. The upper floors of the building were by the flames and the whole building completely drenched with water which rolled down the staircases in torrents and flooded the offices on the first floor to a depth of many inches.

The operating room with his multitude of costly instruments is a total loss. It was said also that there was not a dollar's worth of insurance on the building or its contents. The results attending the fire are likely to prove most disastrous to the business of the country.

Not a telegraph wire can be connected from the great Western Union operating room which is the centre of the telegraphic system of the continent; the offices of the Associated Press are completely wiped out; a large amount of valuable matter and instruments were burned among the Associated Press' Belongings.

The telegraph company has divided its operating force among the sub-offices, from which places business will be done temporarily. Meanwhile quarters are being prepared at the old Baltimore & Ohio railroad office at 415 Broadway. The Associated Press is at the Pennsylvania depot at Jersey City. After to-morrow it will be at 415 Broadway.

The tickers are all out of order and there are no reliable stock quotations.

The Associated Press has one wire working between Washington and Jersey City and one wire to the west. The United Press wires are prostrated.

The Evening Telegram and Evening Sun have been issued without a line of news from any Point Outside of New York City.

At 7.15 four streams were playing on the building from Broadway and Dey street and the firemen were clambering up the adjoining buildings to put on more streams. But the firemen were stopped in the midst of their work by a sight that sent a thrill of fear through the oldest of them.

On the balcony on the very top of the building were five girls who had been left in the restaurant unconscious of their danger and they were shrieking for help.

The immense crowd which had gathered on Broadway were watching the girls with eager interest. The firemen on the roof next door to the Western Union building shouted to the girls to keep cool and they would be saved, but the girls facing the flames bursting from the windows a few feet away grew terribly excited and one of them started to jump over the railing to the adjoining building but she was Held Back by Her Companions.

Just when it seemed that the girls were doomed to perish by the flames a rope was shot up to them by means of a rocket. The aim was true and the means of escape grasped. Soon a fireman quickly climbed up the rope and prepared to let the girls down. Such a hazardous descent was not necessary, however, for other firemen had in the meantime got into the rear of the extension of the Western Union building with ladders and had placed them in position for a safe descent. The girls were hurried to the rear and taken down the ladders safely. One of them fainted and the others were so frightened that they could not help themselves.

The loss is estimated at from $200,000 to $300,000. The cause of the fire is not known.

Later Reports.

It is now stated that the fire in the Western Union hall first started in single wires over the switch board, caused by an old wire crossing a live one. Engineer Clark was asleep in a room on the roof and was awakened by cries of fire. He finished his breakfast leisurely in coolness and held quiet, but he managed to escape as the girls had. Mrs. H. F. Adams received the last message taken in the operating room, from Albany, from a happy man notifying a friend that he was a father. It was exactly 7 o'clock when Mrs. Adams, leaving up, saw the Fire Destroying the Room.

Many employes lost their clothing, which had been placed in the cloak room. It is executed that one hundred wires will be in use at the temporary quarters at 415 Broadway. The firemen took the hose out of the building about two, although the water is still deep on the floors. A survey was made of the upper floors and it was found that the cables and pneumatic tubes are intact and will soon be available for equive room at the fifth floor and such other rooms as may be had in the neighborhood. Assistant Chief Bailey, of the fire department, stated to-day that the additional water supply furnished by the opening of the new aqueduct probably saved the Western Union building. W. J. Dealy, manager of the Western Union operating room, says the fire was confined to the battery room, operating room and one floor above. A careful estimate places the loss at between $60,000 and $100,000.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Senate Still Occupied with the Sundry Civil Appropriation Bill.

The House Takes Up the Original Package Bill.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, July 18. The Senate resolution offered yesterday by Mr. Allison, making it in order in the consideration of appropriation bills to move to limit the debate on the amendments to five minutes for each Senator, was laid on the table.

The consideration of the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill was resumed, the pending question being the amendment repealing the irrigation provisions in a fire bill of October 2, 1887, excepting that receipts and canal sites heretofore leased or selected shall remain segregated and reserved from entry or settlement.

Mr. Reagan continued his argument against the amendment and in favor of the irrigation scheme initiated by the act of 1890.

A message from the House asking a conference on the land territory bill, was presented and the request was granted. Messrs. Platt, Dolph and Paddock were appointed conferees on the part of the Senate.

Mr. Reagan went on with his argument against the pending amendment.

The amendment repealing the irrigation survey law was voted after discussion, agreed to. Other amendments were agreed to, including one striking out the item of $75,000 for the irrigation survey.

The bill was laid aside with sixty-three pages disposed of out of a total of 114.

A conference was ordered on the land forfeiture bill.

Mr. Vinton introduced a bill repealing the tax of ten per cent. on the circulation of state banks, providing no bigger tax be levied on such circulation than that on national banks; referred.

Adjourned.

House.

Mr. Cannon, from the committee on Rules, reported a resolution providing that the House shall immediately proceed to consider the original package bill, the previous question to be considered as ordered, on Monday after the reading of the journal, and the House shall next consider the bankruptcy bill, the previous question to be considered as ordered on Wednesday after the reading of the journal.

Mr. McMillin and Mr. Outhwaite opposed the resolution as not allowing sufficient time to consider such important bills.

The resolution was modified to provide that appropriation bills shall not interfere with the consideration of the two bills and it was then adopted.

The Original Package bill was taken up. Messrs. E. B. Taylor of Ohio, Morse of Massachusetts, Hood of Iowa, and Henderson of Indiana, supported the bill, and Mesdrs. Culberson of Texas, and Adams of Illinois, opposed it.

Pending further debate the House took a recess. Nothing was done in the evening session.

The House adjourned.

SPORTING NEWS.

Portsmouth 9, Bangors 2.

The game in Portsmouth Friday.

The Portlands did up the Bangors yesterday afternoon to the tune of 9 to 2, in a game which was not particularly interesting as it was considerably one sided, especially after the fifth inning. When the game stood 6 to 2 in favor of the visitors. The Portlands made what of their runs on errors, which were of a decidedly amusing character.

Stetter pitched an excellent game for the Bangors, his few hits being made off him, and Sullivan gave the best exhibition behind the bat, although he had no opportunity to show how he can throw to second. For the Portlands the battery work of Lemkin and Webster was the feature. Lemkin allowed only a few hits and kept them well scattered.

The teams were as follows:

PORTLANDS.

Flavin 2b; Lemon p; McGovern 1f; Marvey lf; Dreery ss; Webster c; McAndrews 1b; Reede cf; Hamel 3b.

BANGORS.

Prescott 1f; Kelley ss; Sweeney 1b; Donahue 2b; Sullivan c; Ruby 3b; Stetter p; Gutherlet; Trigas cf.

The same teams will play again this afternoon at 3.45. Ruby and Sullivan will be the Bangor battery and Marvey and Flavin will officiate for the visitors.

Rowing.

The St. John A. A. team has secured the services of Howe, one of the pitchers on the Harvard team. He is not to receive any salary as he wishes to preserve his amateur standing.

The Portlands defeated Rockland's nine at Rockland Thursday, early by a score of 15 to 4. Maroney pitched a splendid game. Bean and Blackington, who pitched for Rockland, were both way off, the former being batted out of the box. Bird played a wretched game as third, and is largely responsible for the defeat. Gray and Winslow of the home team both played nicely.

An Excellent Book.

We have received with the compliments of the publishers a very well gotten up map of the Maine Central Railroad which is valuable as a reference and very handy to have about.

The extensive system is well illustrated and the map, which is a large one, shows fully how easily the different portions of the State may be reached by this well equipped line.

Such weather as that of yesterday with its cool, pleasing air, was a most agreeable change from that of recent times.

The trains into this city are now heavily loaded with passengers. Superintendent Hall says that they are generally exactly on time.

LOCAL MATTERS.

For Summer Outings.

THE DAILY WEEKLY will be sent to persons going out of town for any period of time, and address changed as often as desired, at 15 cents per week, postage paid.

A train of five elegant Pullman cars will pass through the city from Boston for Yarmouth City, Nova Scotia, next Monday.

The remains of the late Rev. B. Bernard Chalmers, who died at Bar Harbor, Thursday, passed through the city yesterday on their way to Bridgton.

Rev. C. V. Hanson, of Stowhegan, will speak to-morrow afternoon at the meeting for men on the Y. M. C. A rooms. A large number will doubtless be present to hear him.

Miss Anna Edwards, who will occupy the pulpit of the Essex street Baptist church Sunday morning, will speak upon the present subject of non-partisan temperance in the same house Monday evening.

The latest amusement at the amusement resort in the latest Park game, "Third in Winn" which is meeting with great favor among those summer visitors who enjoy an evening game requiring little or no exertion.

Camden's cool sea breezes, combined with Mr. Magnuttelock's polonaise performance, continues to draw visitors from the overheated cities. Quite a number of Bangor people are stopping at the resort, which is one of many attractions.

Six of Kennell Nichols' double teams start out to-day for some of the surrounding country towns with the advertising agents of Portsmouth circus. The country towns will be thoroughly billed for the appearance of the circus in this city August 5th.

Thursday Steamboat Inspectors William Flowers and Charles Staples, Jr., went to Camden and inspected the steamer Thwiling. Next week they will go to Moosehead Lake where they will inspect seven steamers out of the twenty-one now on the lake.

Railroad Commissioners Morland, Wades and Bowers went over the Bar Harbor branch of the Maine Central Railroad yesterday on a tour of inspection. They returned to this city on the evening train and passed the night at the Bangor House. They will leave on this morning's train for Augusta.

The Bangor Band gave another very enjoyable concert last evening in Center Park and the usual very large crowd which attends the musical feasts was again present. The programme was carried out according to the list published in yesterday's Weekly, and the different selections were very finely rendered.

A Boston gentleman who was in the city yesterday says that Thursday was one of the most sultry days yet experienced by Boston. The air was exceedingly close and oppressive and every movement was quite an exertion. It was such weather as drives people away to the sea shore where they can get a breath of cool air.

The first number of the Sea Breeze is to be issued to-day and may be found at D. Clysse's, on Main street, this evening after arrival of the western train. This year's issue will consist of eight numbers, two more than previous years, and it is now ready for publication, making it one of the oldest seaside journals in Maine.

The Directors of the Pleasantgate Central Park Association have issued posters announcing that another tree will come off over their park in Foxcroft, Tuesday and Wednesday, August 19th and 20th. Four hundred and fifty dollars in premiums are offered, divided into four classes: 3 minute, 2.40, 2.50 and free-for-all; $100 each in the three first mentioned and $150 in the free-for-all.

W. P. Oakes, Esq., C. E., has recently been tracing the state rein east from North Moosel. He found no difficulty in following the trend by the out croppings of Barren Mountain and Township No. 7, east of Milliketville. There is evidently credit enough in Piscataquis county to supply the world's market for a thousand years. This boundless source of wealth waits the development, which capital and labor alone can promote.

MAINE PATENTS. The following list of patents issued to Maine inventors for the week is reported for us by Mr. Percy W. J. Lander, solicitor of patents and draughtsman: Allen Hackett, Pittsfield, manufacturer of spools and bobbins; Joseph Knight, Livermore Falls, baker; Elmer N. Bachelder and F. E. Lovejoy, Portland, manufacturing vessel. Whole number for the week: Patents, 426; designs, 30; trade-marks, 14; labels, 3; reissues, 0; total, 594.

A short time ago Messrs. Chas Page and George Andrews started from Lake View, Hillo, to go out to Highland quarry settlement about two miles distant to see an acquaintance. To expedite matters they made a cut through the woods, but missed their bearings and lost their way. All night long these "babes in the wood" wandered around in sombre forests with the pelting rain washing the enthusiasm out of them at every step. Some time next day they found their bearings and returned to Lake View, where they were welcomed with refreshments for the lower inner.

THE LATEST IN JEWELRY. Our jewelers report some of the latest wrinkles in jewelry as follows: A novel glove buttoner is made of gold and platinum in the shape of a shepherd's crook. The demand for enamelled flower jewelry shows no abatement. Among the betting book fads is one with a cover of exhibited silver, in imitation of riveted boiler plates. The spoons d hoop-jin is declared by the ladies to be "out too pretty for anything." The figure is of carved mandarins, the tall stories, with small diamonds. The latest design of fashion in London is for ladies to display pins and brooches of at thole, and to wear at the throat a soft rosette of bright silk instead.

THE SCHOOLS SHOPS FACTORY. It is now expected that the manufacture of spoons at the new Schoolts Factory will commence on a large scale in early autumn. Nearly 1,000,000 feet of spoot bars are stacked in the yards ready and waiting for the machinery to start. Last winter five men were employed by the Shoolts Thread Co. in cutting the white birch room and sawing them into bars. The machines for making spools are being fitted at Holyoke, Mass., and will soon be brought to the factory, ready to be set up. A 100 horse power engine and two boilers of 50 horse power each will serve to drive the machinery. There are only four great commerce to the machine [illegible]

A portion of the railing at the end of the southerly section of Central bridge was taken out Thursday for some purpose and was not replaced. Thursday Officers Mickerson and Fahey patched it up as best they could to make it safe for foot passengers. The railing was not put in place yesterday and Captain Nickerson tied it up last night with a rope. It was a careless piece of business and might have resulted in a drowning accident.

The delightful weather for some time past is being taken advantage of by the people and is proving very lucrative for the livery stable keepers. Buckboard rides are numerous and there seems to be quite a craze in that direction. The neighboring resorts, and they are both numerous and beautiful, are receiving large numbers of visitors. Mr. L. Nichols informs us that every team in his large establishment was out yesterday, buckboards and all.

The matter of erecting a large mach ine shop on the site of the Shaw tannery is under consideration by the Dexter Board of Trade. The cost of lot, water privilege, the erection of a suitable building and putting in the wheel ready for connection with the shafting, is estimated at $4,000. This sum has been practically secured and work has already or will soon be commenced. The Dexter Machine Company is to lease the property for ten years at $300 a year annual rental, with the right of purchase after two years. Lathes, planes, drilling machines and almost everything in the way of industrial implements are to be manufactured.

TAKING PRISONERS. Repeats come from all over the State that dogs are either killing people or are chasing at them, and in many places the hottest precautions are being taken against the animals, which at this time of the year are liable to go mad. Muzzling and regulations in regard to licensing are being enforced with good results. A big dog in this city which has given signs of rabies recently and which on Thursday bit at some children was chloroformed that making sure that he would create no further trouble. Too many precautions cannot be taken, as in the summer time there are many tramp dogs about which feed upon rubbish and are liable to become mad.

THE MOOSEHEAD INN. Mr. Alfred Swanson returned yesterday from Moosehead Lake where he has been hanging the shades and curtains at the Mooshead Inn. The hotel is almost entirely completed and it is expected that the formal opening will take place week after next. It is a very finely located and handsomely built structure and will doubtless have a large number of guests during the summer. There are already quite a number there who occupy rooms which have been completed. They take their meals at the restaurant, the regular hotel cuisine not yet being in working order. The situation of the hotel gives a very fine view of the lake and the spot is a very attractive one. The opening will be a very pleasant affair and arrangements are now being made for it.

The three masted schooner Florence, Capt. Gould, from this port, for Philadelphia with lath, was run into at 3 A. M. on Wednesday, off Sandy Hook, in a dense fog, by the coal steamer Portlaw from Philadelphia for Boston, and was cut down to the water's edge, sinking. The wreck was towed into the lower bay, where she filled and went over on her beam ends. Her crew were all saved, the captain and first officer being landed at Sandy Hook. At noon Thursday two powerful tugs had the schooner towing slowly up to New York. The Florence is a fine vessel of 355 tons, built at East Dorring last fall for J. S. Winslow & Co., of Portland, and was insured.

L. A. W. WHEELMEN. Our wheelmen, who are members of the L. A. W., will attend the meeting for the election of officers of the Maine Division American Wheelmen which will take place between this date and August 15th. Votes will be recorded up to noon of Friday, August 15th. The division is entitled to the election of a chief consul, a vice consul, a secretary-treasurer and two representatives. The following nominations were made at the division meeting at Lewiston, May 30th: Chief Consul, Dr. George E. Dow, Portland; Howard W. Breen, Portland. Vice Consul, Cyrus Batchelder, Sanford; Howard M. Breen, Portland; George W. Ames, Lewiston; A. L. T. Cummings, Biddeford. Secretary-Treasurer, A. L. T. Cummings, Biddeford. (1) Representatives, James O. Whittemore, Fairfield. Dr. Dow and Secretary Cummings decline a re-election.

BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS. The loan and building associations through the State are evidently in the most flourishing condition judging from the very favorable reports made from time to time. Bangor has a very prosperous association and another is the Pisatiaquis association which has just declared a semi-annual dividend of 3 per cent. The association enters upon its fourth year of successful operation. A new series of shares has been opened, many of which were promptly taken. These shares have proven thus far a safe and profitable arrangement for small savings from month to month. From the beginning, the affairs of the association have been under the management of competent and reliable men, without change. A respectable amount of capital has accumulated from the sale of stock and interest on loans, and there are no outstanding liabilities, except those of the shareholders. These are always promptly met. About 450 shares are in the hands of members. All moneys paid in are quickly loaned on good security and at satisfactory premiums, to be used in aid of building purposes. Many dwelling houses owe their existence to the association.

ICE SHIPMENTS. The shipping of ice on the Penobscot goes steadily on, although there is no great rush in the business. About every house and stack has had a vessel loading at it, and the cargoes have been put in at a rapid rate. Many of the vessels which have come now are big ones and have taken many hundred cargoes of the product of the ice farms. Ice shipments along the Kennebec are reported to have been more extensive than they have been previously this season. Wednesday there were seventy-five vessels in the river after cargoes of ice and they were of unusually large size, averaging 300 tons each, which would give a total carrying capacity of 22,500 tons. The shipping is now largely from the houses, the stacks with two or three exceptions being cleaned out; the larger part of the stack has been taken down to August. Nearly or fully one-half the ice on the river has been shipped up to this time. The demand for several weeks past has ruled rather slack, the price paid being from $2.50 to $4.00 a ton for immediate delivery. The Augusta Lumber Co. has contracted for large stock

The G. A. R. Encampment.

The 14th reunion of the 1st Maine Heavy Artillery will be held during the week of the national encampment, Wednesday, August 13, at 10 o'clock, A. M., at the furniture warerooms of S. C. Small & Co., 71 and 73 Portland street. This is the headquarters for Maine soldiers, and members are requested to report there on their arrival in Boston and register their names there in a book prepared for that purpose. Mail can also be sent there, if desired.

The accomodations committee has made the following assignments of quarters for Maine posts:

Jamison Post, 110, North Bradford, Mechanics', 25 men.

Haskell Post, 108, Yarmouth, Mechanics', 25 men.

Spear Post, 140, West Gardiner, Mechanics', 30 men.

The New England Railway Publishing Company is to issue in August the A B C Pathfinder, G. A. R. Guide and Strangers' Directory, which will contain a map of Boston, railroad and steamboat time tables, places of interest, street car routes and time tables, and general information that will be valuable to all visitors to Boston.

AMUSEMENTS.

City Marshal Whitney Receives a Letter of a Runaway Horse.

The boys of still another horse stealing gang reached this city yesterday when City Marshal Whitney received a telegram from Mr. W. P. Gibbons of Woodstock, N. B., stating that a horse was stolen from him Wednesday night. The telegram stated that the horse is a bay, with the off hind foot white, five years old, quite a small white mark across the nose. The wagon is a light express, with a drop seat, and painted black. The harness is silver mounted. If any person sees such a team he is requested to telegraph to Marshal Whitney. It is not known what direction the thief took, but the information of the theft is being sent out in all directions, and if the team makes its appearance in Maine, the thief will doubtless be captured. City Marshal Whitney and his officers will keep a sharp lookout, and if the team appears here it will be but a matter of time before it is returned to its owner. There have been several cases of horse stealing lately but only one in this city. The prompt success of that attempt should be a lesson to those who have thieving propensities.

SCRATCHED 28 YEARS

A Scaly, Itching Skin Disease with Endless Suffering Cured by Cuticura Remedies.

If I had Eczema or the CUTICURA REMEDIES twenty-eight years ago, it would have saved me $500 in doctor's bills and much suffering. I had the disease (psoriasis) commenced on my head in a spot not larger than a cent. It spread rapidly all over my body. Any one who knew me could testify to the fact. The doctors tried a drop of it on all the time, and my suffering was endless, and without relief. One thousand dollars would not tempt me to go through what I suffered for 28 years of age. All the same moment the great heart for the stomper, the latter's engines slow down. The poor old steamer meet at the point of an exist right-angle. Lines are cast; the pen-made fast to floats alongside the ship's port side; and the rope-ladder is lowered. Meanwhile the pilot has resigned the pen on the bridge. The chief officer immediately takes his place. Supplied by the chief mate the pilot certified to the log book that the ship has safely cleared the port of New York; the ship's compradore certifies the pilot's fee, which mileage is duly paid by the New York agents of the line; and in a moment more the pilot has been "dropped" into the waiting boat. By the ship's mill stands the purser, or the mate's steward. A thousand addressed good-byes have been hastily written, sealed and stamped, and hundreds of telegrams folded, between the decks and the fleet. Then, the last tender friend between land and home and the irreparable duality of your voyage, are let down by line to the pilot, who takes them as with unexpected tenderness in his arms. In another instant the ship's engines are again thundering. The pilot's boat shoots astern for the lightship. The officer on the bridge looks to the boatswain, whose shrill of pale "strikes the flags." The quartermaster brings down the ship's three flags—the "blue Peter" of sailing day, the flag of the company, the owner's or "house" flag from the mainmast, and the badge from the gaff—to a deck-hat hooker will bring some gay bit of postage from its dight quivertingly to his feet. A farewell cheer rings out over the port side after the departing pilot.

YOUR VOYAGE HAS NOW REALLY BEGUN.

There can nowhere be noticed a more picturesque change than that which in twenty-four hours' time after sailing-day has come over the scenery, apparatus and environment of from one thousand to two thousand souls on your great ocean steamer. The quiet people in dark gray jeans and tweeds hold their own handsomely. These were the least hilarious and cheerfulness at sailing. But they comprise but a trifling percentage. Nearly all the rest have come aboard as they would attend a reception or the opera, with a view to making something of an impression. That quite forgivable human weakness of ever being on the alert to be thought well of, has had every form of expression. This one has held a variably jovial in the wharf. Another has arranged to receive all manner of needless correspondence and telegrams. Another has actually sent to a choice circle P. P. C. cards, with name of steamer, sailing date and hour, with a del cate intimation that the presence of dear friends at sailing would be a pleasing token of regard. This brings a score of carriages, a crowd of folk, a dozen be as regrets by messengers, and what is still more acceptable, because of its impromptuness, a perfect ovation in fruits, bon-bons and flowers. It is a treat to this class of departing ones to overhear expert inquiries like, "Who are these people?" "What party is that?" "High rollers, that crowd, eh?" And the silks, diamonds and laces of these people are overwhelming. They know it, and a pleasant little thrill of conquest comes of it all. But the height of delight or despair to these nouveaux riches is found in the matter of parting floral offerings. The chief steward of the great liner upon which I am now writing estimates the value of flowers sent to the cabin within twenty-four hours previous to sailing as often reaching fully $2,000! One stand never cost less than $350. How its possessor, a wicked old crone of seventy, bid underneath paint, wig and bangs, and bespangled with diamonds, glared with scorn at the $50 or $100 offerings piled upon the cabin tables! But some of our New York worthies are very clever about this. Steamship flower-show.

"Do you see that magnificent figure?" asked the steward, pointing to a piece four feet in height artistically formed into simulacrum of the coat-of-arms of quite a celebrated English house. "The lady of the family to whom this was sent, claims to be of noble birth, although her husband sells rum for a living. She crosses often with us; and she usually has the handsomest offering sent aboard. I know her florist very well. She makes the order herself. Just before 'gein' ashore' going, is sounded, if you keep a sharp lookout, you will see that her offering is suddenly whisked ashore. Scores of 'em do that."

"Where is the point in the manœuvre?"

"Why, a gentleman on the port side of the Scenes on an Ocean Liner.

[COPYRIGHT—1890.]

At Sea, June 23, 1890.

There is only one place where the great Atlantic liners come to a complete stop, unless from accident, between their New York docks and Queenstown. This is for a most interesting little incident and a memorial, of which first-trippers usually have no knowledge, and which even old voyagers seldom quite understand. It is called "dropping the pilot."

If you are still upon the promenade deck and have got the mists of parting one of your eyes, you have perhaps wondered what that bronzed-faced man in oilskins clothing was doing up there among the bespangled officers upon the bridge. He seems the quietest fellow on board. His eyes are singling out the row of changed buoys, or, with a glass, rapidly scanning the lower Jersey shores and the green rolling lines of the Long Island sands, or again, glancing at this point or that along the sea horizon. He is an accurate fact. The lines in it unconsciously picture the man as look that tells of something lost, or of great danger that there may be. I have seen men like him stand where he is with that same look, and the perspiration dripping from their faces in streams in the coldest of weather. This man is not the ship's captain; but while he stands there, now and then giving a low-toned order, he is absolutely the commander of the ship. He is a New York pilot, detained from his lower Wall-street pilot office to take your ship to sea. In ordinary cases his fee would be based upon the ship's tonnage. With the larger a "lump" price is made. He must remain aboard until Sandy Hook is passed, and, as much further out, as the chief officer desires. It is he who tells whether, when you are abreast of Sandy Hook, you will notice a row-boat, yacht-built, manned by two men, putting out from the lightship anchored between your steamer and the Hook. This lightship is simply a New York harbor pilot-boat, by pilot regulations made to do her "turn" of a "month's stand" in this discovery, though quite exciting, berth. Her crew are pilots' pre-clock getting their first lessons and experience at pilots' duties and hardships. The boat being rowed briskly towards your steamer in the channel is called a "pilot's yacht," and the two sections are hardly built practice hulls of eighteen or twenty years of age. At the same moment the great hook for the stomper, the latter's engines slow down. The poor old steamer meet at the point of an exist right-angle. Lines are cast; the pen-made fast to floats alongside the ship's port side; and the rope-ladder is lowered. Meanwhile the pilot has resigned the pen on the bridge. The chief officer immediately takes his place. Supplied by the chief mate the pilot certified to the log book that the ship has safely cleared the port of New York; the ship's compradore certifies the pilot's fee, which mileage is duly paid by the New York agents of the line; and in a moment more the pilot has been "dropped" into the waiting boat. By the ship's mill stands the purser, or the mate's steward. A thousand addressed good-byes have been hastily written, sealed and stamped, and hundreds of telegrams folded, between the decks and the fleet. Then, the last tender friend between land and home and the irreparable duality of your voyage, are let down by line to the pilot, who takes them as with unexpected tenderness in his arms. In another instant the ship's engines are again thundering. The pilot's boat shoots astern for the lightship. The officer on the bridge looks to the boatswain, whose shrill of pale "strikes the flags." The quartermaster brings down the ship's three flags—the "blue Peter" of sailing day, the flag of the company, the owner's or "house" flag from the mainmast, and the badge from the gaff—to a deck-hat hooker will bring some gay bit of postage from its dight quivertingly to his feet. A farewell cheer rings out over the port side after the departing pilot.

YOUR VOYAGE HAS NOW REALLY BEGUN.

There can nowhere be noticed a more picturesque change than that which in twenty-four hours' time after sailing-day has come over the scenery, apparatus and environment of from one thousand to two thousand souls on your great ocean steamer. The quiet people in dark gray jeans and tweeds hold their own handsomely. These were the least hilarious and cheerfulness at sailing. But they comprise but a trifling percentage. Nearly all the rest have come aboard as they would attend a reception or the opera, with a view to making something of an impression. That quite forgivable human weakness of ever being on the alert to be thought well of, has had every form of expression. This one has held a variably jovial in the wharf. Another has arranged to receive all manner of needless correspondence and telegrams. Another has actually sent to a choice circle P. P. C. cards, with name of steamer, sailing date and hour, with a del cate intimation that the presence of dear friends at sailing would be a pleasing token of regard. This brings a score of carriages, a crowd of folk, a dozen be as regrets by messengers, and what is still more acceptable, because of its impromptuness, a perfect ovation in fruits, bon-bons and flowers. It is a treat to this class of departing ones to overhear expert inquiries like, "Who are these people?" "What party is that?" "High rollers, that crowd, eh?" And the silks, diamonds and laces of these people are overwhelming. They know it, and a pleasant little thrill of conquest comes of it all. But the height of delight or despair to these nouveaux riches is found in the matter of parting floral offerings. The chief steward of the great liner upon which I am now writing estimates the value of flowers sent to the cabin within twenty-four hours previous to sailing as often reaching fully $2,000! One stand never cost less than $350. How its possessor, a wicked old crone of seventy, bid underneath paint, wig and bangs, and bespangled with diamonds, glared with scorn at the $50 or $100 offerings piled upon the cabin tables! But some of our New York worthies are very clever about this. Steamship flower-show.

"Do you see that magnificent figure?" asked the steward, pointing to a piece four feet in height artistically formed into simulacrum of the coat-of-arms of quite a celebrated English house. "The lady of the family to whom this was sent, claims to be of noble birth, although her husband sells rum for a living. She crosses often with us; and she usually has the handsomest offering sent aboard. I know her florist very well. She makes the order herself. Just before 'gein' ashore' going, is sounded, if you keep a sharp lookout, you will see that her offering is suddenly whisked ashore. Scores of 'em do that."

"Where is the point in the manœuvre?"

"Why, a gentleman on the port side of the

to the florists, are taken to pieces, and are all sold in cheap bouquets at the ferry-houses before night."

"I did keep a sharp lookout and did see a number of the finest pieces 'whisked ashore.'" It was a pretty little bit of

SOCIETY CUNNING

I had failed to know about before. Quite theatric, too. But these steamship flower-shows are something really tremendous. At the first meal or two, their possessors are literally banked in flowers, to the great inconvenience and mortification of others. Near my own seat were a mother and daughter in a desperate way. Probably not more than $200 or $300 worth of flowers hedged them in like a fairy chevaux-de-frise. They were contemplating another castellated battlement of the same sort, further down the table, a trifle more gorgeous than their own. "I don't blame you, Helen," said the mother with haughty disdain. "It showed a very mean spirit in him."

"Mean spirit!" retorted the daughter, writhing in anger. "George's a hog! That's what he is. I shall just order the steward to pitch them overboard at once. He said I should have the finest on the steamer—the brute! This settles him. He'll get his congé at Liverpool. No—I'll table it from Queenstown!"

George was evidently betrothed to this belle. He had only sent her $300, instead of $500, worth of flowers; and had probably gone back to the office, at parting, to cover up the shortage in his accounts. Lucky George, when that Queenstown sublegram arrives! May he be can re-trieve himself on the books, and sometime learn to fervently thank God that he did not invest $200 more of his employers' money in flowers this sailing day.

Twelve three meals at farthest sponge the beauties are from the cabin tables. Fifty plates will suffice for the second day at table for breakfast; perhaps no more than twice that number for luncheon and dinner. Waiter-served table stewards, soiled as mates as a funeral, stand idly by for the two hours of the double sittings, studiously regarding the artistic lights of the gay cabin dome; or rustling, with cutaway and complacently raised the humble apologies of three having sudden indigestions in their state-rooms or upon deck. The flowers have wholly disappeared from the main tables, and, for country's sake, very a little like a shuddering array of bootie ghosts upon the opposite tables in the saloon, as if each withered and trembling bud knew its fate of being pinned into the coat on the morrow. The ship's commander, or her fellow Masonic from view. The purser's window is shut as if prematurely sealed. The ship's doctor has retired behind the pilot-house interpreting at hours and rules. The chief and assistant stewards, to whom your great fee has already paid for a choice seat at the table, refuse to recognize you. Your poem-stamped eyes you with a look of stony suspicion and chary analysis. Will you give him much valuable and will you be glad-some if; complain h s uttermost interest. But his will pursuit no.

EARLY FAMILIARITY.

The encounter finants her white-capped head, plainly saying, "There are character who'd like to be vexed aside my brown to sustain, sir!" The boatswains, whose tricolled, tolerably faces on the first day gave promise of sea-yarns and ocean-bed revelations, are as stolid as bronze or brass. The sergeant-at-arms and deck-stewards walk around you, back you up and down, over and around fore and aft, starboard and port, as if to remind you that their rules are deck law, sir. The bell-boys, whose fists dried up and compadores of the passages, library and lavatories, regard you from beneath knitting brows as with sayage advance protests against possible requests for favors. Wherever where you may on your steamer's decks or within her splendid cabins, you find the savagery, selfish presumption and mute despair. The officers and crew are one and all mostly recovering from port excesses. The few passengers upon their legs are each spending parting melancholy, figuring upon trip expenses, or contemplating the different savings the cusps and the scourges of the sea. The protest-laden hotels are in the throes of overfatigued, unremunerative, non-sickness. And how is lovely the great and great! Look at them sprawling in their chairs, hundreds of them, under the fire coverings, hope, pride, scorn, hilarious, all, down the the floor of the deserted fashion hotels. That pompous old fellow who can draw his check for a cool million, and who, as above, reclines himself a fog of forty, you know, is stretched there like a drunkard, holding his two-pint of lukewarm in his nerveless hand with the most manlike abandon. He reeks not the one who pass; he sees not those who rear. Here is a grand dame, as every a subject of study. Her wig is displaced; the powder and color have been sponged from one side of her face by some attentive sympathizer; her locks, lustrous and silky are disheveled; she is snoring. Arranged and bejewelled, she seems a mad travesty on even some giddy "Miss Bayham," escaped from a nearly bridal chamber and fallen in a "Seven Dial's" debauch. Look at this belle's beauty now. Georgie, back there in New York, would be a lucky dog to catch a glimpse of her divine face this morn ent. He would wait for no cooge from Liverpool. Paint, powder and bijouterie are blended into a dirty French gray upon her leathery countenance. The fag has deposited a clammy ripe upon this. Her eyes seem to have gone back into her head in both and are e cased beneath dirty yellow tids. Amid this wreck of beauty there is one bit of color. It is in her flabby, pointed nose. I would have paralyzed Helen, to have worn a twenty-five-pair lightning-bad at-tem... So from under the edge of her sun-blistered nose rises rare and, red like some hectic blood-light looming above dingy, dank, dolorous lake. In a few days more the long-abused outlets will pass from this little nose to tumescent rubris and turin, and as Helen gaps upon the stagging in Liverpool she rude abdomen spectators will pronounce her an "Hamerican h'object."

One night fill a book with these sea travel studies. A good deal besides seasickness and its rank-traveling power might be dwelt upon but the old traveler, and the first tripper who is cautious and conservative, will never be tempted into remarks about his prowess in bouts with the fall destroyer. At the first and second meals, you are likely to roar a little along the line. But you will regret it. Listen to those retching wretches in their state-rooms below. Each one had flung a chalice to old Neptune, a power. The little dude has lisped under his napkin, "Lying wight dwown on one's back'll do nauses, I'll allow." The Chicago packer, loading his plate with another swath of his own boneless ham has snorted, "Pshaw, Lake Michigan c'n knock the spots of this pond any time, for roughness. Nobody ever slept out our way." The ladies cranes, "Dear me, it isn't possible any one could be ill on this boat, is it, now?

before an invisible jury with inimitable "Now, sirs," and hoary citations and precedents that settle the whole matter. The clergyman, blessing for his faith, replies "It's all merely a matter of imagination." While the man with the Ignatius head, brass jaw and iron stomach, closes the discussion—and his meals at table, with the rest of us, for a few days—by an explosive, "All damned nonsense sir! Have a stomach of iron like me, sir!" But they are all done for now. The dude is developing his "lying wight dwown" theory; the ladies are glaringly changing their adjectives; the packer is comparing the peculiarities of lake and pond; the clergyman has a new study of the pleasures of the imagination and the man with the iron stomach is slipping its cogs as helplessly as with the ordinary mortal diaphragm. And so until "the cranks" are crossed. If you have luckily had your little battle at first, you now suffer loneliness, and hunger for society. There is not a single responsive gleam of companionship in any face aboard ship. You become desperate. You see a being in blue and gold away out forward there. You slide, slip and slide along up to it. The being proves to be a ship's officer—first, second, third, or somewhere along the line. But it is alive has hearty jowls, a big paunch, and hoping there be-speak geniality, you timidly address it.

"Beg pardon, officer, but are these fogs always to be found here on the banks?"

The being is a blue, gold and bronze statue for a long time. Finally as you despair and are about to turn away, its red head suddenly turns quarter round, and you involuntarily listen for its click. Then its cavernous, coral mouth expands frightfully while the being roars,

"Ow de H'I know? H'I deaut hide ere!"

You somehow feel like adjourning your aboard-ship studies until the return of sunny weather.

TO SOFT SOAP BATS.

Time was when the third watt either were stowed away in bunks; when the household fat was used, and in the spring out came a tub, and that bright the sickness of the year's supply of soft soap. But now all this is forgotten, and when soap is needed, it is purchased at the store, and "turn them out all clean," as Artemus Ward used to say, that ever will go in for Brownell's soap for that is the best and most economical.
